

REP. VAN D. YETTER said last night the General State Authority has appropriated $1,780,000 to East Stroudsburg State Teachers College.

Money in the appropriation is to be used to construct the following:

A new women's dormitory at a cost estimated at $800,000. This is one of the most badly-needed features at the college. During recent years the campus has been overcrowded. College officials were forced, this past year, to lease the Indian Queen Hotel in Stroudsburg as housing for female students.

A new library and administrative building. An estimated $530,000 of the appropriation is earmarked for this purpose.

Building
A new science classroom building containing 10 rooms, to be constructed at a cost of about $350,000 or $35,000 per room. The new structure would replace present science laboratory facilities housed in Oakes Hall, oldest building on the campus.

Miscellaneous Items for which funds are set aside: $65,000 for expansion of the college heating plant; $30,500 for extension of steam, water, sewage and electrical services on the campus and $4,500 for a "comprehensive study of the campus."

Rep. Yetter, (D-Monroe), of Marshalls Creek, told The Daily Record last night that he had been advised that the appropriation could be made public by John N. Foraker, executive director of the GSA.

Yetter has worked closely with Gov. George M. Leader in paving the way for the allocation of funds, he said.

Note
Rep. Yetter noted that the allocation of these funds rests finally with the Governor. In the case of the local college appropriation, Yetter said that it had been an honor to work with Gov. Leader in preparing for the allocation.

Yetter praised the fast action of the GSA in approving the allotment of funds following direct recommendation of the Governor's office. The Marshalls Creek assemblyman noted that a building program for the local college is imperative if it is to expand its horizons for better education for more students in the area.

Administration of the building program at the local college will rest, in its final phase, with the Department of Public Instruction, Rep. Yetter said.

British Troops Enroute To Mediterranean

LONDON, Aug. 5 (AP)—Britain's "Red Devils" paratroopers sailed for the Mediterranean and Egypt called up some army reservists to night in the Suez war of nerves.

The shadow boxing came even while Arab neighbors lined up behind Col. Gamal Abdel Nasser—defending Egypt's right to nationalize the Suez Canal.

President Camille Chamoun of Lebanon, traditionally moderate in Arab politics, warned the West in a speech that any antagonistic move toward Egypt might lead to "the West losing forever the confidence and cooperation of Mideast peoples."

Communiqué
The British Foreign Office said "no comment" to the Iraq announcement, saying she "stands beside Egypt in the dispute over the Suez issue."

Iraq is one of Britain's main sources of oil.

Britain's "Red Devils"—regarded as an emergency fire brigade unit—sailed for the Mediterranean in high spirits and cries of "Where's Nasser?" Hastily-chalked signs on their vehicles read "Look out Nasser, here we come."

Wearing their red berets and camouflage tunics and carrying full battle equipment, the 1,200 troops boarded the aircraft carrier Theseus prepared for any eventuality arising from Egyptian President Gamal Abdel Nasser's seizure of the Suez Canal.

Republicans Name Dr. Hess

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5 (AP)—In the midst of pre-campaign discussion of President Eisenhower's health, Republicans today picked Dr. Elmer Hess of Erie, Pa., as chairman of a medical-health committee to work for Eisenhower's re-election.

Dr. Hess, immediate past president of the American Medical Assn., is now inspecting hospitals in Israel.

Brink's Robbery Suspects Go On Trial Today

BOSTON, Aug. 5 (AP)—Eight Greater Boston men go on trial tomorrow in Suffolk County Superior Court charged with participation in the Jan. 17, 1956 Brink's robbery of $1,218,211, the biggest cash haul in history.

Indications are that it will be several weeks before a word of testimony is heard in what is expected to be a lengthy trial.

Two thousand men and women living in Suffolk County have been called as prospective jurors. They will appear in groups of 100 a day until 14 jurors—a regular panel and two alternates—have been chosen.

Congressmen Release Letter

NEW YORK, Aug. 5 (AP)—A group of congressmen today made public a letter calling on Communist party chief Nikita Khrushchev to admit Stalin's guilt in the 1940 massacre of Polish officers at Katyn Forest.

The letter, dated July 26, was signed by former members of the House committee to investigate the massacre in which 4,243 Polish officers were slain.

Released to the press on the stationery of Rep. Ray J. Madden (D-Ind) the letter carried the names of six congressmen. One of them, Rep. Daniel J. Flood (D-Pa) said he did not aid in writing the letter.

Others
Other signers were Reps. George A. Dondero (R-Mich.), Alvin O'Konski (R-Wis.), Timothy P. Sheehan (R-Ill.) and Thaddeus M. Machrowicz (D-Mich.).

The letter said the congressional investigation established "beyond the shadow of any doubt that the Katyn massacre as well as the murder of another 11,000 Polish officers on Soviet soil, was the work of the NKVD—Soviet Secret Police."

"Since you have already rightfully blamed Stalin and Beria for so many crimes," the letter continued, "the non-Soviet world is at a complete loss to understand why you did not include the Katyn Forest massacre in your list of crimes committed by Stalin and Beria. There is no crime of Stalin's which has ever been proved so meticulously and so completely documented."

Four-Year Term

LA PAZ, Bolivia, Aug. 4 (AP)—Hernan Siles Zuazo, 42-year-old lawyer who led the Easter week revolution in 1952, will be inaugurated president for a four-year term tomorrow. He was elected July 17.

Heavy Storms Roll Into Pennsylvania

By The Associated Press
Heavy thunderstorms which caused damage unofficially estimated at several hundred thousand dollars hit scattered sections of Pennsylvania Sunday with the heaviest storms reported in western Pennsylvania.

At least two deaths were an indirect result of the storms which toppled trees, flooded highways and roads and knocked out thousands of electrical and telephone lines.

The hardest hit areas were Pittsburgh, Edinburg, City, Uniontown, Greensburg, Conemaugh borough, near Johnstown, and some sections of Venango County.

Some of the districts were hit twice—early Sunday morning and late Sunday afternoon.

Steelworkers Return To Work Today

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 5 (AP)—The vanguard of 650,000 steelworkers packed their lunch pails today and headed back to the mills. The nationwide steel strike was virtually ended by a weekend rush of labor contract signings in New York.

The workers face the mammoth job of getting month-long idled furnaces back into operation and trying to make up an estimated loss of 10 million tons of steel production. Wage losses will exceed 255 million dollars.

Best guesses were that a little under 20 per cent of the country's strike-weary steelworkers were on call for midnight shifts.

Employee recalls will quicken during the week as iron-making blast furnaces and steel-making open hearths are speeded into production. The bulk of the workers were expected to be back on the job by week's end.

Estimate
Estimates for returning to the prestrike production rate of above 90 per cent of capacity range from 10 days to three weeks, depending on the company.

The nation's industries—reliant on steel output—will feel strike effects for a long time. Reserve steel inventories were hard hit by the dispute—longest in the steel industry since the 54-day walkout of 1952.

Layoffs of more than 100,000 employees in steel-related industries were attributed to the strike. The first of these will probably get back when steel-owned coal mines resume. Many are scheduled to reopen tomorrow.

Still to come is a boost in the price of steel. Top officials of the industry have indicated strongly it will be a substantial hike. That news is expected to come this week.

Many manufacturers may have to tack the additional cost of steel on to their own product prices. That would mean passing it on to average families who buy an auto, a washer or any one of thousands of other items.

Actually, United Steelworkers pickets still walked in front of plants of a few major basic steel producers—Allegheny Ludlum, Inland, Armco and Youngstown Sheet and Tube. But their troubles were expected to end quickly.

Negotiations Possible

FELDAFING, Germany, Aug. 5 (AP)—Prof. Carl J. Friedrich of Harvard University, former adviser to the U. S. military government in Germany, said today the Bonn Republic eventually may have to negotiate with East Germany for German reunification.

Review Board To Consider McKeon Case

PARRIS, Island, S. C., Aug. 5 (AP)—Sgt. Matthew C. McKeon settled down today on the tedious mental treadmill of a man who waits—and waits for the worst while hoping for the best.

It may be months before he learns whether reviewing authorities will uphold yesterday's court-martial sentence for the April 8 death march into Ribbon Creek that cost the lives of six members of Marine Corps Platoon 71.

McKeon, a tall, 31-year-old career Marine, was sentenced to a bad conduct discharge, nine months in prison, and reduction in grade to private.

"I sure don't want a BCD," McKeon repeated over and over as he sat in the living room of his tiny, off-base home in nearby Port Royal.

He was convicted Friday night of drinking on duty and negligent homicide. He could have gotten three years and a dishonorable discharge. But neither he nor defense attorney Emile Zola Berman expected as severe a sentence as he received.

On this 5,000-acre Marine training center, McKeon's conviction and sentence still was a burning point of controversy. Many of McKeon's noncommissioned officer comrades bitterly resented it.

The little white base schoolhouse which was converted into a courtroom was being reconverted to its original status. Gone were the teletypes and direct phone lines of the newspapers. Gone also the microphones of radio and the lights for television cameras.

The most controversial court-martial in 180 years of Marine Corps history was at an end. McKeon settled down to a routine.

After Mass, the Roman Catholic combat veteran scheduled a day with his family—subject to sudden interruption. His wife, Betty, 28, expected their third child at any time.

Two Children

The McKeons have two other children, Becky, 5, and John, 1. Actually, McKeon's life will not be too different than it has been since the tragedy of Ribbon Creek. He will not be imprisoned or his rank stripped from him unless and until the reviewing authorities uphold his sentence. Thus he and his wife will continue to draw $345 a month in pay and allowances due a staff sergeant during the months before the reviewing decision.

McKeon will train no more recruits under any circumstances. The Marine Corps has made that clear. But he will continue as an enlisted aide to the Roman Catholic chaplain on the base, the Rev. Maurus Cook.

Within a few minutes after yesterday's sentencing, a big glass jar appeared at the staff noncommissioned officer's club.

Dollar bills, 5s, 10s and 20s began building up inside at once—a gesture from McKeon's fellows that he need not want. He was touched when he learned about it and speechless. He just shook his head.

Catholics List Plans For Integration

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 5 (AP)—Archbishop Joseph Francis Rummel, who has declared segregation "morally wrong and sinful," today said Catholic schools of the New Orleans archdiocese would remain separated for whites and Negroes at least one more year.

In a pastoral letter read at Masses in the Deep South archdiocese, the Roman Catholic prelate said integration would be postponed until at least September 1957.

Parishoners were promised that integration, when it came, would be moderate and gradual, affecting the elementary schools one grade at a time. The archbishop did not mention secondary schools.

Declaration

"Our declaration against racial segregation as outlined in the pastoral letter published in the churches of the archdiocese on Feb. 11, 1956, still holds true as a guide of Catholic conduct," added Archbishop Rummel.

In that letter the archbishop first declared that racial segregation was "morally wrong and sinful." His declaration, at that time, was widely interpreted to mean integration would begin for some of the archdiocese's 60,000 white and 12,000 Negro students this September.

Stevenson, Stassen Hit With Verbal Brickbats

By The Associated Press
ADLAI STEVENSON may be the front runner for the Democratic presidential nomination but he caught it hot and heavy from all sides yesterday.

All the day's political brickbats weren't reserved for Stevenson, however. Harold E. Stassen, who wants to dump Vice President Nixon and give Gov. Herter (R-Mass) second place on the GOP ticket, got his share.

Mrs. India Edwards, codirector of the Harriman for President organization, was one of those who teed off on fellow Democrat Stevenson. She called him a "me too" candidate who couldn't win the November election "because he was not a winner in 1952."

She also criticized his "moderation" stand on various issues and said "if the American people want moderation, they'll re-elect Eisenhower."

Gov. A. B. (Happy) Chandler of Kentucky, who also seeks the Democratic nomination, said he didn't think Stevenson could be elected even if he won the nomination—and he wasn't sure Stevenson would be nominated.

Chandler's choice as the Democrat who could beat Eisenhower—Chandler.

And it wasn't only the Democrats who rapped Stevenson. In San Francisco, Republican National Chairman Leonard Hall called him a candidate "of the ADA (Americans for Democratic Action) wing of the Democratic party."

He said it was only recently that Stevenson had "become a moderate" on issues of the day. ADA is a group that supports the New Deal and Fair Deal policies of the Roosevelt and Truman administrations.

Stevenson, meanwhile, was taking things easy at his suburban Chicago home in Libertyville, Ill. An aide reported he was "studying the major issues—taking a fresh look at them."

His strategists claim he will have about 600 of the 686 votes required for nomination when the convention opens. They also claim a first-ballot nomination is a possibility.

On the Republican side, Sen. Martin (R-Pa) and Rep. Judd (R-Minn) drew a sharp bead on Stevenson and his "dump Nixon" efforts.

Stevenson, wearing pajamas, was released yesterday after three years of imprisonment on treason charges and was given a joyful welcome by the villagers of Ah-madabad.

Bronx Woman Perishes In Readers Crash

REEDERS—Monroe County's 13th highway fatality of the year occurred yesterday afternoon when two 1956 autos were involved in a collision near here on the Tannersville-Readers road.

Mrs. Caroline Wagner, 40, of the Bronx, N.Y., died shortly after she was admitted to General Hospital with a broken neck, massive internal hemorrhage, crushed chest and a broken right arm.

The two motorists directly involved in the collision were injured. Wayne Singer, 28, of Stroudsburg, RD. 3, was in fair condition at the hospital last night. His right arm was almost severed in the crash, and he also suffered a broken right clavicle, State Police said.

The other driver, Harris Butz, 69, of Tannersville, was discharged after being treated for lacerations of the head and lip, and a bruised chest.

Meanwhile, a third motorist, Richard Miller, 18, of South River, N. J., and formerly of Stroudsburg, RD. 3, was arrested by State Police on a charge of involuntary manslaughter. Justice of the Peace John C. Foelker ordered Miller held in $1,000 bail, and set 7:30 tonight for a hearing.

Troopers said the accident occurred at 3:45 p.m. as Butz was proceeding driving east toward Tannersville. Behind him was a car occupied by three young women, and a third operated by Miller.

Passing
Suddenly, the Miller vehicle started to pass the other two as the Singer auto approached from the opposite direction, troopers said.

Seeing the Miller car, Singer applied his brakes on the wet pavement and skidded into the path of the oncoming Butz car, almost identical with his own, State Police said further.

The Miller car ran off the left side of the road, troopers added. Singer's blue-and-white sedan was virtually demolished. The entire right side, on which Mrs. Singer was sitting, was completely bashed in. The front of the Butz car was also extensively damaged. Total damage was estimated by police at $3,000.

Mrs. Wagner, and Butz and Singer, were brought to the hospital by its ambulance. At 5:15 p.m., the woman passed away.

Her body was later removed to the Lanterman Funeral Home. Arrangements will be announced later.

The accident was investigated by Troopers Steven W. Sabin and Alex G. Kegan.

Aluminum Strike Talks Renew Today

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 5 (AP)—Efforts to end the five-day-old strike of the United Steelworkers against the Aluminum Co. of America will begin anew tomorrow in New York City with federal mediators sitting in.

Joseph F. Finnegan, director of the Federal Mediation Service, said yesterday in Washington that negotiators for both sides have agreed to meet with him in the service's New York regional office at 2 p.m.

Finnegan planned to meet with company representatives in a separate morning session. It will be the first meeting of the company and union since 18,000 workers walked off the job Wednesday at 12 Alcoa plants.

The union called another 10,000 of its members out on strike at nine plants of Reynolds Aluminum Co. at the same time. A settlement with Alcoa probably would set the pattern for agreement with Reynolds.

Both Alcoa and Reynolds offered the union a three-year, no-strike contract which the companies said would give workers an hourly package increase of 46 cents during the life of the pact. The union rejected the offers.

Union President David J. McDonald has never put a figure on his demands on the aluminum firms. Among other things the union wants a substantial wage increase and a 52-week lay-off plan.

Last week, Alcoa signed a three-year contract with Aluminum Workers International Union, subject to ratification by a majority of the union's locals. Balloting must be concluded by next Thursday.

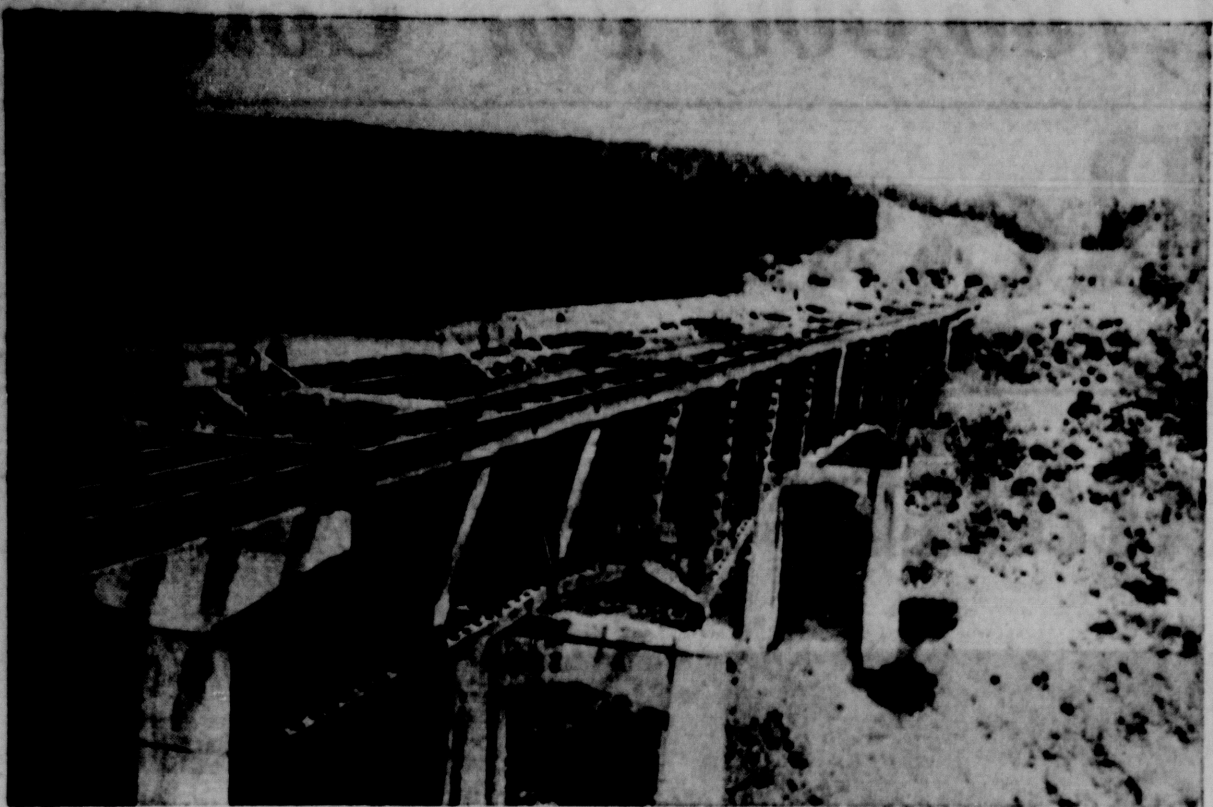

The first of the nine Alcoa plants employing 15,000 AWIU members approved the pact last night.

Leader in Harrisburg as a first stop for the huge airliner.

The plane tour of Miss Pennsylvania and her traveling companion, Miss Ellen Krauss, West Chester, will continue to Pittsburgh tomorrow and to the Wilkes-Barre-Scranton Airport at 11:02 Wednesday. They two young ladies will be met by Holt Wyckoff, Stroudsburg. The party will leave Avoca and fly to the Poconos, landing at approximately noon at the Stroudsburg-East Stroudsburg Airport.

Among those meeting the Wyckoff plane carrying Miss Pennsylvania and her party will be Walter Peeney, president of the Pocono Mountains Chamber of Commerce; Harry Ahnert, president of the Pocono Mountains Vacation Bureau; Mrs. Robert Miller, hostess for Miss Pennsylvania and her companion while in the Poconos; and a representative from The Daily Record.

Entertainment

Due to the limited period of time allotted for Miss Pennsylvania's visit, a full program has been planned for her beginning with a luncheon party in the Wyckoff Tea Room at 1 p.m., where she will be interviewed by Madelyn Maloney over radio station WYPO's Wyckoff Shopper program. Later in the afternoon, Miss Pennsylvania will be a guest of the Fred Waring's at Shawnee Country Club, where a Pennsylvania Dutch Dinner is scheduled, consisting of the seven-sweets and seven-sours course. The program will end with Miss Pennsylvania being entertained in Mt. Pocono, at High Point Inn's "Bride-of-the-Week" program.

Miss Ringler, a singer and a fashion model, was Miss Delaware County in the recent State finals in West Chester, and will represent the State of Pennsylvania at the National Miss America Finals in September when Miss America is chosen. She will return to the Poconos next spring to crown "Miss Pocono Mountains 1957" and will tour the Poconos via automobile.

Stroudsburg Youth Suffers Critical Neck Injury In Accident

Schroeder Pinned Under Upset Car

AN 18-YEAR-OLD Stroudsburg youth last night was in critical condition at General Hospital with a broken neck, which he received when he was pinned beneath a car which overturned on Route 611 near the State Highway Shed early yesterday.

John B. Schroeder, of 1144 W. Main St., was injured when he was thrown out of a car, driven by Ernest E. Lesoine Jr., 17, of Stroudsburg RD3, which went out of control on Route 611, about three miles north of Stroudsburg, at 1:25 a.m. yesterday, State Police said.

Lesoine suffered multiple lacerations and bruises, but was discharged after treatment at the hospital.

Driving South

The accident occurred as Lesoine was proceeding south toward Stroudsburg in his late model sedan, troopers said. He was in the process of passing another auto, when the former car suddenly went out of control, went across the highway, and overturned after going down an embankment.

Schroeder's neck was pinned under the right rear wheel after being thrown out of the vehicle, which was extensively damaged, troopers said.

The driver was unable to explain why the car went out of control, according to investigating trooper, Edward Beneski.

Ike Signs Safety Bill

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5 (AP)—President Eisenhower signed today a bill aimed at cutting down, and perhaps eventually preventing entirely, the tragic death toll of children trapped in refrigerators.

The new law forbids interstate shipment of any household refrigerator whose door cannot easily be opened from the inside.

Two Years

The ban takes effect two years from now, the delay being allowed to give refrigerator manufacturers time to incorporate safety devices under standards to be set by the secretary of commerce.

The legislation sponsored by Rep. Roberts (D-Ala.) was touched off by increasingly frequent reports of children caught inside refrigerators and iceboxes and suffocated.

District Engineer Seeks Added Funds For Clearance

STATE DEPARTMENT of Forests and Waters will receive a request for an additional $160,000 to complete clearance work in the jurisdiction of the Stroudsburg flood control office.

District Engineer James E. Bailey said last night the money is needed to finance projects already completed, or under construction, State Council of Civil Defense previously gave pre-audit approval for allocations amounting to $650,000.

In addition, Bailey pointed out, his office has already requested another $256,000 for projects involving smaller streams and tributaries.

Cost

This means that streams clearance work in the district will cost about $1-million, all told, Bailey said.

"To date," the district engineer said, "the department's field forces have cleared approximately 455,000 linear feet of flood channels at an estimated cost of $616,017.59."

"By field investigation, it has been revealed that there remains approximately 128,600 linear feet of channels to be opened and restored from the potentially dangerous debris obstructions, under File 5902," he continued.

"Assuming comparable costs with previous similar operations," Bailey pointed out, "it would appear that an amount of approximately $193,230 would be required to close the books on the subject program."

Bailey said the following stream clearance projects have been completed, or are under construction: Devils Hole Creek, Coolbaugh Township; Big Bushkill Creek, Middle Smithfield Township; Goose Pond Run, Barrett Township; Levitts Branch, Barrett Township; Paradise Creek, Paradise Township; Pocono Creek, Swiftwater Creek; Pocono Township, all in Monroe County; Manny Run, Dreher Township, Nineteen Mile Run, Dreher Township, both in Wayne County; Shohola Creek, Shohola Township, Pike County, and Wallenpaupack Creek, Wayne-Pike Counties.

Power Mower Injures Child

LEVITTOWN, Pa., Aug. 5 (AP)—An 18-month-old girl lost parts of her left arm and left foot last night when run over by a power mower being operated for the first time by her mother.

The left arm of little Diana Morrison was amputated below the elbow by doctors at Lower Bucks County Hospital. The mother had chopped off a portion of the left leg and fractured three of the baby's ribs.

The mother, Mrs. Gloria Morrison, 28, of nearby Middletown Twp., told police she was mowing the grass on her two-acre property when the child ran suddenly into the path of the big machine which is equipped with a seat.

John Dall Returns To Pocono Playhouse Tonight

MOUNTAINHOME—John Dall, a Pocono Playhouse favorite, makes a return visit to Rowena Stevens' theatre this week in N. Richard Nash's hit Broadway comedy, "The Rainmaker."

The play opens tonight; runs through Saturday night with matinees on Wednesday and Saturday. Dall was seen at the Playhouse in 1953 with June Lockhart in "Gramercy Ghost." He was slated to appear last year in Leslie Stevens' play "Champagne Comedy," but the engagement was cancelled because of the August flood in this area.

Dall has made a name for himself both on Broadway and in Hollywood. Never satisfied with "success" alone, Dall has repeatedly returned to New York stage when the right, challenging role came along.

Hollywood

In Hollywood his major films have included "The Corn Is Green" with Bette Davis, the movie adaptation of Lillian Hellman's "Another Part of the Forest," Alfred Hitchcock's masterful treatment of "Rope," the play and movie based on the Leopold-Loeb case.

One of his biggest New York hits was the comedy, "Dear Ruth." But Dall's reputation as an actor has been solidly built on the strength of his characterizations in such plays as "Red Gloves" and "The Heiress," the latter in a City Center revival, and the Maxwell Anderson drama, "The Eve of St. Mark."

Supporting Dall in "The Rainmaker" will be Elizabeth Lawrence, Art Smith, John Napier and Richard Poston. Director of the play is John O'Shaughnessy. Settings will be by Ballou.

Tickets may be obtained by calling the theatre boxoffice or from boxoffices in Stroudsburg.

Pennsylvania Needs Shortway; Support Of Everyone Is Urged

Opposition to construction of the Keystone Shortway between Stroudsburg and Sharon is centered in two separate sections of the Commonwealth—one north and one south of the proposed route.

In the south, the opposition takes on two forms. One is along the route of the Pennsylvania Turnpike, the other in Philadelphia. In the north, certain elements along Route 6 are against the Shortway proposal.

In Philadelphia, a small but powerful group has attacked the Stroudsburg-Sharon route because, presumably, money that would be required for its construction would hurt that city's chances of obtaining enough funds to build the Delaware Expressway.

Philadelphia sources also have linked their efforts to prevent construction of the Shortway with similar moves in some of the counties served by the Pennsylvania Turnpike, notwithstanding the opinion of traffic experts that the toll road will have to be widened to accommodate all the vehicles predicted for it by 1970.

Growing population figures in the southern half of Pennsylvania, in contrast to a decline in the north, bear out the argument that the Turnpike has been a great boon to business and industry on both sides of its route.

It would appear, therefore, that Southern Pennsylvania interests who oppose the Shortway do it with a purely selfish motive in mind. They seem to fear the possibility the Shortway will slow down their rate of growth by spreading the increased business and trade over the entire state.

Their disregard for fellow Pennsylvanians, we feel, is short-sighted. The Shortway would bring new industries into the state, providing work for additional people and contributing immensely to the economic growth of all of Pennsylvania. And as a vital link in the shortest roadway between New York and Chicago, the Stroudsburg-Sharon freeway would bring new business into this state—traffic that is now diverted through other states.

The Poconos area would benefit greatly in the years to come by being able to attract thousands of vacationers by way of the Shortway. Business in general would show an upturn, industries would be brought closer to their markets and sources of supply and the whole of Pennsylvania would be enriched by development of the northern counties.

Route 6 interests express their opposition in a different manner, but no more convincingly. Those who have raised their voice in protest object to substitution of the Shortway in place of Route 6 in the federal program of interstate roads.

They do not take kindly to an alternate proposal which calls for modernizing Route 6 under the federal-state program, which provides for equal sharing of the costs. In the interstate program, the federal government pays 90 percent, but insists on limited access main freeways designed to avoid communities and meant primarily for through, rather than local traffic.

This means comparatively few points of entrance and exit. To put Route 6 on such a program would be disastrous for the many business establishments along it who are dependent upon users of the route. Limited access would prevent farmers entering the road from their lanes, would eliminate most of the access roads to it and shut off abutting business establishments.

Since Route 6 passes through many communities, the road likely would be rebuilt to include by-passes of the communities. Modernization of the road under the federal-state program would not require limited access, but would make Route 6 an excellent highway for local as well as long-distance travel.

New York State is studying the possibility of trying to convince federal highway officials to build what it calls a "Quickway" across Southern New York State, so that it would have not only Route 17 but a through limited access highway.

We are convinced, that if Pennsylvania gets its Shortway, New York will not seek its Quickway, and the same is true in reverse. That is why every effort is being made to get the Shortway scheduled at once.

We believe Pennsylvania needs this new through route, built along the lines of the Turnpike. It will help to bring tourists into the state and enable them to reach quickly the local roads leading to scenic and tourist centers. It will provide an important military highway and open a new area for industrial and business growth. In effect, will be good for Northern Pennsylvania, but it will also benefit the entire state and nation.

You can do your part in persuading state and federal officials to support the Shortway by addressing a letter to them. Tell them why you think the Keystone Shortway should be built. Many letters already have been mailed, but it will take an avalanche of letters to convince officials we are united behind the proposal.

George Sokolsky Says...

Hoover, Soon To Be 82, Remains Active On Number Of Political, Literary Projects

On August 10, Herbert Hoover, HERBERT HOOVER AT 82 — one of the two living ex-presidents of the United States, will be 82 years old. He is still active, working hard on a number of political and literary projects. He will speak at the Republican Convention.

If the Presidency is a man-killing job, it did not kill Herbert Hoover, although he suffered more grief in that position than most. John Adams, who also had a hard time in the Presidency, lived to be 90. Since James Madison, no President lived to be Mr. Hoover's age, and few of them were as young in spirit or as energetic as he is at whatever age. There must be an advantage in being a Quaker or perhaps in so living that one can sleep peacefully at night or even for an hour or so during the day, which the current crop of doctors recommend as a complement to taking tranquilizers.

Because Herbert Hoover has lived so long, he has had the advantage of watching a public opinion turn from execration to admiration. I can recall when men whose careers had been built by Herbert Hoover turned from him lest their careers might be damaged by guilt by association. Herbert Hoover took such ingratitude and cowardice in his stride, recognizing the weaknesses and foibles of human nature and receiving callers who had betrayed his friendship without complaint. It was the way he was brought up.

The admiration of the people which came to Herbert Hoover late in life was undoubtedly a product of his constant usefulness. He neither sulked nor retired but devoted himself to whatever work came to hand always reserving an old man's right to tell the truth to an errand and opportunistic generation. He probably devotes himself so much to Boys' Clubs because he is an eternal optimist.

There can be no question but that Hoover was often disappointed by the vagaries of the Republican Party. He had favored Robert A. Taft over Thomas E. Dewey and Dwight D. Eisenhower, but his preferences had nothing to do with personal friendship or associations; it was rather that he believed that the Republican Party's role was that of a conservator of traditional American ways and he felt that those who compromised too ardently would be pulled too rapidly toward the New Deal Left. He did not believe in the New Deal as a way of life, in the political opportunism which it developed or in the kinds of personalities who emerged into active political life because of its attractions. Nevertheless when Harry Truman requested his services, he gave of his time and energy unstintingly even when old age was taking its toll of illnesses.

But his spirit of adventure and service strengthened him and when last I saw Herbert Hoover some weeks ago, he was in a wonderfully youngish mood, physically well, smoking his pipe and commenting on the curious era in which we live. It gives one great courage to know that his voice is still heard in the councils of the nation.

I call attention to his 82nd birthday because some of the best minds in our country are men who have passed three score and ten and who have not retired from activity and probably never will until they die. There is Bernard Baruch who will be 86 on August 19, and is still laboring to bring some system and sanity into democratic administration; there is General Douglas MacArthur, now 76, who is quiet, and unostentatiously utilizing his years for his country's advantage. I was talking on the telephone recently with Karl Von Wiegand, 82, newspaper correspondent, whose prognostications as to what is likely to happen in Europe have been correct these past 40 years to my certain knowledge. Many a so-called by-line youngster might learn something of historic objectivity from Von Wiegand.

I could go on listing oldsters by the yard who are doing their daily share of the work of the world and what I think might be appropriate is to use Herbert Hoover's birthday on August 10 to give consideration to the plight of those over 50 who are not employed because personnel managers and life insurance officials cannot come to terms on pension plans which include those who combine wisdom, experience and soundness of view. This nation needs to protect the dignity and earning capacity of its older citizens.

Fairly Spoken By MARGARET LATROBE Tough Marine Training Helps Keep Boys Alive

Message from a Marine:

In the Marine company, they called him "Pop." Because he was a ripe old 33, as old as it was possible to be and still enlist for boot camp in 1941, December. He was maybe a little overweight, but but no one mentioned it. Quite soon 40 pounds shed made "Pop" as lean as any 18-year-old sharing those Camp Elliott training days.

It seldom happens this way, but after Pop went through Officers Training School and received a commission, he was given command of his old company of men. He was tough on them; they liked it that way. There was no talk of such punishment as "no seconds for desert." There wasn't any desert, anyhow. But there were marches, dog-trotting along under full packs for 25 miles. There were swimming practices, and a man did well to learn how to hold his rifle clear, round the buoy, and paddle himself out of deep water. Or else.

There was rifle and pistol and fire-fighting and hand-to-hand combat to be learned. There were any number of tough measures to master. Hardly a Marine inquired if there would be two ice cream cones for the good little boys for superior marksmanship. Man, you learned not to miss. You would damn well keep your head and your seat out of the air if you had notions of living very long.

This was training. Marine training. Though they might have been children yesterday, they were big boys today. Boys going into battle. Whether they came home or dropped on a beach at Iwo Jima or Saipan or Guadalcanal's jungles depended first on luck, next on how well they had learned to stay alive.

The enemy didn't serve ice cream, not even rice pudding. They served bullets from caves, trees and the hidden bunkers of Iwo Jima. You wanted to be a hero? You stood up for a nice long look, maybe wondering where the ice cream wagon was? Boy, you stood for the last time.

Yes, the Marines were tough. Some were out there three years without leave, without rest. Eating by their own fires the fish they caught. No strikers carried up the tents and cots, no mess hall to the rear served hot goulash and biscuits. Hell no, no a spoonful of ice cream. They fought, those Marines—and ate now and then if the Corporations were handy. "Pop," then a captain, set up his headquarters under a wagon tongue over which a tarpaulin was stretched. He was sick, but not too sick to run his own show—in the rain, in the mud and filth. They tried to relieve him but he wouldn't leave his men. Said he would shoot anyone who came near him. Unless it was to toss him another quart of whiskey.

The Marines have an extra something. They won't take just anybody. They can't. Their kind of fighting is too tough, too hard, too dangerous for the feather-bed boys. But whoever wants to be a Marine had damn well better be one. They can't be boys—and Marines. They must be men. Smart men, fighting men, who can kill one or a hundred enemy without a tremor. They must be men of tenderness too, who never leave a wounded comrade in the field. Many a captain Pop included, wept when mothers wrote about their dead sons, sent food packages to him who led her son, begged for details as to how he died. What could you tell her? That her son might have lived had he learned the lessons Marines must learn? No. You wrote her that her son died a hero. That was true; just being there made him heroic. But—he might have come home a hero except for the moment he forgot—what lesson? Any of those tough ones "Pop" taught him. They didn't make boot camp tough for the aggrandizement of commanding officers. They made it tough so young boys could learn to stay alive under the most frightful conditions yet known.

Try and Stop Me —by Bennet Cerf

An Old-time Indian Chief came to a doctor's office and demanded "You fix sick man." "That's what I'm here for," said the medico. So the aged Injun led him to a wagon, drove him eleven bumpy, dusty miles to his adobe hut, entered, laid down, groaned; then announced, "Gut hurt too big you fixum."

There was a slight earthquake near Tacoma several years ago, and the guests of a small hotel got quite a shaking up. They were mighty scared, too. One man remained calm, however. A frightened fellow-guest called back, "I'm from Chicago. What do I do?"

Robert S. Allen Reports

Harriman Going All Out To Win Convention Delegates

Washington, August 6—Governor Averell Harriman, in his furious presidential campaign, is talking in person or by long-distance telephone to every one of the 1,372 delegates to the Democratic convention. Telephone officials estimate the cost of the New Yorker's far flung and tireless phone blitz at $10,000.

In his abortive 1952 presidential drive, Harriman's convention expenses alone amounted to $85,000. His preparations for this year's Chicago convulse indicate that well over $100,000 will be spent there.

Foremost on the 65-year-old Governor's telephone list is former President Harry Truman. Harriman phones him practically every day, and frequently several times a day.

This daily conferring and counseling with Truman is part of Harriman's key strategy. His great objective is to prevail on the former President to spearhead a last-ditch offensive for Harriman. Harriman is firmly convinced that if Truman will go all-out for him at the convention, that will turn the trick and put him over.

Truman has a good opinion of himself and his potency as a Democratic leader. But the Missouri has not "bought" Harriman's ideas—and given no indication of being likely to do so. They include former Secretary of State Dean Acheson, former Interior Secretary Oscar Chapman, Mayor of Pittsburgh and Pennsylvania National Committeeman David Lawrence, Illinois National Committeeman Jack Arvey, and Senator Clinton Anderson, N.M., who was Truman's first Secretary of Agriculture.

These veteran party chiefs also have cautioned Truman against presidential efforts of Kefauver.

"If you aren't careful," one of them frankly told the former President, "you may find yourself without a ticket. It's an open secret that you prefer Harriman, and if you now try to stop Kefauver, you'll be in an awful fix if the slate turns out to be Stevenson and Kefauver."

Another powerful party leader urged Truman to announce he is keeping hands off the convention battle.

"You should state without any qualifications before the convention opens," this veteran politico declared, "that you will support whoever is nominated for President and Vice President. You should leave no doubts about that of any kind. And you would also be smart not to go to Chicago until just before the convention opens. This idea of yours of getting there early smacks of king-making, and you don't want to create that kind of impression. It would be unworthy of you."

Truman gravely nodded agreement with these forthright views. HOW HE DOES IT—Governor

Harriman does his telephone wooing of convention delegates at all hours of the day and night.

Since Kefauver's withdrawal from the top race, Harriman has concentrated on talking to the Tennesseean's supporters. In some instances, he has talked to them several times and at great length.

A graphic illustration of Harriman's persistence and endurance in his three-hour phone talk with Sam Rizzo, head of the Wisconsin delegation.

A Racine, Wis., United Auto Workers organizer and ardent Kefauver enthusiast, Rizzo is now leading a "draft" movement to make him Vice President. Harriman started phoning the laborite within an hour after Kefauver switched to Stevenson. When Rizzo returned to his Washington hotel that evening, he found 10 messages that Harriman and his assistants had been trying to get him.

When Rizzo was finally reached by Harriman, he told him, "I've got operators looking for you all over the country." The laborite expressed surprise.

"I was very anxious to talk to you," explained Harriman, "to let you know that I am not pulling out of this race. I'm sticking to the end. This is too important a battle to let Stevenson win it without a fight. I'm the only liberal now left in the race, and I am appealing to you as a liberal for support."

"Sam, liberalism was born in Wisconsin and you are a part of that historic movement. You and I can't let it die. I know you are not for moderation or for turning the Democratic party over to the South. I know you want a civil rights program that is strong and that means something. That's what I want. You want a liberal Democratic party, and that's what I want. Sam, the only way we can keep the Democratic party liberal is by nominating a liberal for President. You can't have a liberal party unless you have a liberal standard-bearer. That's why I want your help as a liberal."

Rizzo was friendly, but promised nothing.

"I know you're a liberal, Governor," said the Wisconsin laborite, "and I am inclined to go along with you. But for one thing. Now that, Estes is out of the picture for the presidency, I am interested in nominating him for second place. I think he has a very good chance for that, and I am not going to do anything to hurt those prospects."

"Well, don't make any commitments until you have talked -laau-yglaoeir-flo to me," urged Harriman. "Remember, we want to win this election. And the only way we can do that is by keeping the Democratic party liberal with liberal leaders."

"I'll talk it over with the delegation," Rizzo replied. "It will be up to the majority. Whatever the majority decides, that's what we'll do."

"I'll be in touch with you," concluded Harriman, "I'm counting on you as a liberal, Sam. We liberals must stick together."

Each day the size of the circus troupe located at Stokes Mill is growing.

Soon the former King Brothers Circus, now known as the Maley Circus, will be at full strength.

The troupe, which has fought its way out of bankruptcy, plans to put on a show in this area on August 18.

The show will be complete with a "big top" an item they said was missing from the circus world a few short weeks in the past.

The law is well established that maritime claims are limited to the value of the salvage. When a ship is on the bottom, it has no value. Keller Kin In "Bridey" De-bunker

The controversy aroused by the publication of the book "The Search for Bridey Murphy" by Morey Bernstein is beginning to die down, but local people may not have realized that one of the most quoted figures in the controversy was someone they knew.

Dr. Margaret K. Bowers (the K standing for Keller) was a contributing author to the book, "A Scientific Report on 'The Search for Bridey Murphy'" published this year. Dr. Bowers, a niece of Mrs. Floyd Bachman and Miss Ellen Hoffman of the Stroudsburgs, lived for a time in Stroudsburg and attended school here. She is former resident psychiatrist of the New York State Psychiatric Institute, a member of the American Psychiatric Association, the Tennessee State Medical Association and the Society for Clinical and Experimental Hypnosis.

"Scientific Report" is an analysis of the Bernstein book and highly critical of his methods as an amateur and of the conclusions he drew from the revelations of a subject under hypnosis which he attributed to her "reliving" of a Bridey Murphy personality from a previous existence.

In the book, Dr. Bowers deals with the nature of "Understanding the Relationship Between the Hypnotist and His Subject." As a practicing psychoanalyst who uses hypnosis where it seems indicated in the therapeutic treatment of disturbed patients, she analyzes not only Bernstein's findings but also Bernstein himself in the light of his book.

Just Between Us

—by Bobby Westbrook

A house with every bed filled with its proper occupant has an entirely different feeling to a mother arising to the routine morning chores. When one of the family is away, the mute reminder of a tidy bed, unmussed and unoccupied, in sort of sets the tone of her whole day.

It may be a very happy day, but there lingers through it a sort of incompleteness. A part of your thoughts and a part of your care are somewhere else.

Our house came all-of-a-piece when we woke Saturday morning to find that sometime during the night Pete had arrived and gone quietly to bed without arousing anyone. Making beds may be no specially pleasant chore but it's infinitely preferable to having them forever made.

Pat Dodson On Newspaper Staff At St. Luke's

Miss Patricia Dodson of Stroudsburg, has been named assistant co-editor of features in the newspaper of St. Luke's Hospital School of Nursing where she is now a student. The newspaper, Luke-O-Site, carries news of interest to the students.

Miss Dodson, a graduate of Stroudsburg High School, was president of its Future Nurse Club.

Anyway, it seems much easier to concentrate on the subject at hand. Which reminds me that with all the summer activities and vacation absences, cancer dressings have been sort of neglected, and at the present are in critically short supply.

Which is why the appeal has gone out to groups who worked so faithfully through the winter to get busy again to replenish that supply. Continuing demands are always the hardest to fill. A big one-time effort isn't so difficult, but when the need goes on and on it gets harder and harder to get people to help.

Cancer dressings and blood donors are two continuing activities which must be met this week.

Petticoat President Again Election Year Topic

By Jane Fada

WASHINGTON — A woman for president? That election-year question is popping up again.

Top women leaders of both political parties agree the day might come when a woman will take over the presidency, and they believe a woman is completely capable of handling the responsibility.

But they agree, too, that women have come about as close as they can get to the White House portals in this generation.

Katie Louchheim, director of women's activities Democratic national committee, says there are no barriers preventing women from rising to the top in politics today.

Bertha Adkins, chairman of the women's division, Republican National Committee, and newly appointed chairman of the committee's special activities board for the current campaign, says women have demonstrated their great ability and there is no reason why they shouldn't be as able advisors to the president as any man, serving in cabinet posts and as diplomatic envoys abroad.

"But," she says, "the world is not ready to accept a woman president of the United States, the acknowledged leader among nations. There are many places where women are not given the prominence they receive in this country, and it would be most awkward for a woman president to deal with these nations."

Sen. Margaret Chase Smith (R-Maine) declares: "It's not a matter of sex, but of qualifications and desires and wishes."

Ivy Baker Priest, treasurer of the United States, also believes it is "up to the individual to decide whether she wants to take on the responsibilities involved."

Besides the competency women have shown in top-policy jobs so far, Mrs. Priest cites other qualifications:

"The average woman runs a little government right in her own household. She knows all about income and outgo, health and welfare and diplomacy. If she has more than one child, she also knows about pressure groups."

Former President Truman once said that a woman may be president one day. President Eisenhower has said that women are competent enough, but too smart to take on the job.

Soroptimists Prexy To Promote Latin Americans

New York — The new president of the American Federation of Soroptimist Clubs says one of her major goals will be to help Latin American women gain recognition for their achievements.

Mrs. Emilie Ziegler of San Diego, Calif., said in an interview yesterday:

"It's about time the achievements of Latin American women were recognized and publicized to the world... in further international understanding we want it known that the women of Latin America are not subservient souls but just as accomplished in professional fields as women in the United States or England or France."

Mrs. Ziegler, a counselor at San Diego Junior College and Vocational School, was formally installed last night as federation president. The installation banquet ended the biennial convention of the professional women's organization.

Anniversary Today

Mr. and Mrs. Michael Dellaria of 8 South Kistler St., East Stroudsburg, will celebrate their 18th wedding anniversary today.

Mrs. Josephine Chaffier will accept pupils for the study of piano and theory.

Driebe's Son Born In Georgia

Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. Driebe are the parents of a son, born July 13 in Fort Gaines, Ga.

The baby has been christened Charles James Driebe Jr. Mrs. Driebe is the former Norma Jac Mobley of Fort Gaines.

Driebe is a Stroudsburg resident. According to correspondence reaching The Daily Record, Charles Jr. weighed eight pounds, five ounces at birth, was 20 and three-quarters inches long.

STORE SCENES: Betty LaBarre and Edna Harmon of our jewelry department inspecting with satisfaction the engraving on some beautiful composites and other silver pieces to be awarded in a sports competition at Skytop...

Blanche Mackey offering you a piece of fudge before a large group of customers at the Gift Wrap center, and announcing, "It's wonderful — it's Maudie Elsenhower's recipe." (Blanche of course thinks ANYTHING Elsenhower is terrific — and the fudge was.) ... Shorty Widmer of our advertising department being snowed under by all sorts of compliments for the intensive publicity campaign he waged in behalf of the Pennsylvania Handcraft Guild's recent exhibition at State Teachers College...

Carrie Husk pointing to the racks of famous brand bathing suits that are late arrivals in our sportswear department and selling and sheath styles... Elston Arnt, a summer replacement in our men's department, expressing his satisfaction with the weeks he has spent at Wyckoff's, but taking a rest now before he embarks on his fall teaching chores... Betty Barthelme of our merchandise office, yearning audibly over the tall, green glass candleholder-urn combinations priced at $3.00 each in our gift department, and thinking how stunning they'd be on the mantel of her new home...

Dottie Dunn, at the Wyckoff PBX board, asking how many days the big sale in Sears will continue, because customers are wanting to know. The values are truly worth your consideration... Maudie Walton explaining that her luscious new fall hats, in satins and velvets, are in Maroon Pink, Monocolor Blue, and Peacock Blue, and no one is a whit surprised that the Prince Rainier-Grace Kelly wedding has echoes in fall fashion colors... Customers pausing in our gift department, to study the new Christmas Fantasy Candles — big round, elaborately ornamented and designed to "burn internally." And the same customers drifting to study our assortment of lavish Christmas cards... Esther Almspac, of cosmetology, informing you that, with the arrival of a new month, she and Pearl Walters are re-christening Christmas in July, Thanksgiving in August. Have you ever tried it? It's really a delightful fragrance... Marion Swartley, our College Consultant, getting a thorough workout in merchandising by assisting in the fashion department while Maudie Albert covers the New York market, and in handbags, while Beatrice Gorgy recovers from strep throat... Florence Metzgar, of our toy department, thrilled with her experiences at the first session of her course in beauty culture... Margaret LaBar and Edna Harmon of our drapery department and slip cover workshop respectively, up to HERE in work as everyone races to beautify home and cottage... Hattie Walters thrilled with the success of her August white sale, and boasting one of our store's most exciting departments, what with all the new fall fabrics, linen, and bedding... Thelma and Doug Gordon warning you that if you're planning to outfit the boys for school now's the time to do it, for mothers are earlier than last year in making their selections... The pinocchio club and assorted libbers in the Employees' Lounge drowsing away like a giant bee about the only thing that's keeping me awake this afternoon. Can't figure out whether I'm not taking enough vitamins or whether I've taken so many they're wearing me out... Walter Wyckoff dropping by to talk about some of the new things in his floor covering department and trying to sell me a very chic 8 x 10 black and white rug which he describes as a real value. I don't need a rug — particularly one that size, but maybe you do. How about it? Also Walter tells me he can order some of the most beautiful 9 x 12 reversible braid-type Early American rugs in reversible nylon at approximately $60.00. I've seen them and these are beauties. If you haven't visited our rug department recently by all means do so... Mary Hitesman, Edna Brockman and Shirley Williams just a few of the Wyckoff girls boasting new, shorter haircuts. That Almspac fellow certainly does operate a "clip" joint! Which reminds me — better call him to have your new permanent wave. Those fall hats demand something smart in a hairdo.

Of particular interest to the local group was the premiere of a new composition, not only because the composer, himself was there to take curtain calls, but because it featured the brass and tympani sections with a male chorus. Earl Groner Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Groner, of Stroudsburg is a trombonist with the student orchestra at the Berkshire Festival this summer.

Among the audience at the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Massachusetts on Thursday night when the student concert was given were some from Stroudsburg including Earl Groner, Numa Snyder, and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas I. Metzgar and son, John.

Rust-Oleum Stops Rust On Metals

WHEN YOU'RE looking for an industrial paint that has rust-stopping power, be sure it also has penetrating power.

The reason for this is simple: without penetrating power—through the rust to the bare metal—there can be no lasting rust-stopping power.

Distinctive Rust-Oleum, the paint that is "as distinctive as your own fingerprint," guarantees both.

Rust-Oleum penetration, traced by radioactive C14 radioisotope tracing methods, now enables you to literally look UNDER the metal through the eyes of radioactivity.

You can see this for yourself at the Pocono Paint-Up Center, 722 Main St., local Rust-Oleum dealer. Drop in this week and see the actual photomicrographs of how this unique paint stops rust by penetration.

Martin Vogt, store manager, will be glad to show you how Rust-Oleum works through the fissures and crevices in the rust formation to the bare metal.

Go on Into Pits Rust-Oleum doesn't "bridgeover" the tiny, microscopic pits in the metal, he explained, "but actually goes into these pits to drive out air and moisture and coat the metal with a penetrating, low-surface-tension film that expands and contracts with the metal."

DEDICATION OF A $10,000 amphitheater and $16,000 flagpole took place yesterday at Golden Slipper Square Club Camp near Bartonsville. Taking part were (left to right): Walter Davidson, city commissioner of Philadelphia; District Attorney Victor H. Blanc of Philadelphia; Col. Earl J. Henry, State Police commissioner; Morris S. Jenkins, camp president; Richard L. Rubin, club president.

Golden Slipper Camp Holds Dedications

BARTONSVILLE — More than 1,000 persons yesterday attended the dedication of a new $10,000 amphitheater, and a 70-ft. aluminum flagpole, at the Golden Slipper Square Club Camp near here.

The camp, operated by Masonic groups in the Philadelphia area, each year provides fun and recreation for some 600 needy children, regardless of race, creed or color.

The $16,000 flagpole, imbedded in a six-foot block of Vermont granite, was dedicated in memory of two former Golden Slipper presidents, Morris Soble and Jack Shiffer, who died within 19 days of each other last year.

Philadelphia District Attorney Victor H. Blanc delivered the eulogy in memory of Mr. Soble, the first president, and Mr. Shiffer, who served as third president.

The new Blum amphitheater was dedicated in honor of the family which made the building possible. They are Mayer I. Blum and his three sons, Jerome, Marvin and Bennett.

Retreat
The Harry Carls Memorial, a retreat for camp counselors, was dedicated by Isadore Frankel, welfare director of the club. A building on the camp grounds was remodeled at a cost of more than $5,000 to provide recreation facilities for the counselors. Lew Tender, former lightweight boxer, took part in these ceremonies.

Speaker for the event was Col. E. G. Henry, State Police Commissioner, who noted that Golden Slipper Camp helps in the fight against juvenile delinquency by building youngsters up morally, physically and socially.

When campers return to their homes in the city, Col. Henry said, they go back determined to carry out what they are taught here.

The opening prayer was delivered by Myron A. Robbins, chaplain of the Golden Slipper Square Club, Philadelphia City Commissioner Walter I. Davidson served as master-of-ceremonies.

David Dabrow, director since the camp opened eight years ago, brought greetings, while campers themselves presented greetings in song. Past president William Syk introduced Col. Henry.

Morris Jenkins is the current president.

Long Strike Nears End

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 5 (AP)—Federal Mediator John R. Murray today reported the Westinghouse Corp., and the United Electrical Workers (independent) are "now in an area of settlement" in negotiations to end the 292-day strike at the company's nearby Lester plant. Murray said negotiations would be resumed tomorrow.

Murray indicated an end might be near in the walkout which has idled the plant's 6,000 workers.

A car operated by Lester Lombard, 28, of New York City, went into a skid and crashed into another auto, driven by F. E. Brewer, 35, of Trenton, N. J., Stroudsburg State Police said.

Shock
Troopers further disclosed Mrs. Fern Brewer, 38, suffered shock and a bruised forehead, while Marion Lombard, 27, suffered shock and a possible fracture of the left shoulder. Both were treated at General Hospital and later discharged.

State Police set total damage at $400.

Easton Motorist Suffers Injuries As Car Hits Tree

SERIOUS INJURIES were suffered by an Easton motorist early yesterday when his pre-war car left Route 209 and crashed into a tree seven miles east of East Stroudsburg.

Stroudsburg State Police said Roy R. Yeager, 32, suffered fractures of the skull, arm and knee. His condition was listed as "guarded" at General Hospital last night.

Damage Of $1,000 In Accident

DINGMANS FERRY—Two persons were injured, and a total $1,000 damage was caused in a two-car collision on Route 209, about two miles north of here Saturday night.

Milford State Police identified the drivers involved as Hans Carow, bartender at Laurel Villa Casino, Milford, and Vincent Cascioli, Saugerties, N. Y. Cascioli's sister-in-law, Mrs. Anthony Cascioli of Saugerties, suffered multiple bruises of the legs, and was treated at the office of Dr. J. S. Bullock in Milford. Troopers said Carow was to be examined for possible head injuries.

Left Turn
Carow was making a left turn into Route 209 in his 1953 sedan, when his car was involved in a collision with Cascioli's late model auto, which was proceeding south on Route 209.

The mishap was investigated by Troopers Joseph Wroblewski and Edwin Pierce.
